Emanuel Walker-Brown is currently the mobilization coordinator for the Atlanta-North Georgia Labor Council. With ample experience working with Labor, Emanuel has distinguished himself as an asset to the labor movement. He has successfully put together mobilization efforts here in Atlanta surrounding the AFL-CIO's national day of solidarity (April 4th) as well as creating the first ever Young Workers Council here in Atlanta.

First entering the labor movement as an assistant to the president of ATU local 732; Emanuel began working on numerous contract negotiations, mediation and arbitration cases as well as strategic political actions such as the Marta Red X Campaign. Emanuel then became the AFL-CIO's Union Summer Site coordinator for Atlanta, managing a team of 10 interns throughout the city. He then began working with Atlanta-North Georgia Labor Council thru its efforts to elect Roy Barnes as Governor. Although Roy Barnes was not elected to the governor's seat, Emanuel distinguished himself as a hardworking, dependable person during the stress of a campaign cycle.

After the campaign Emanuel was hired as a mobilization coordinator for the Atlanta-North Georgia Labor Council. He has put together events such as the Stand with Wisconsin at the state capitol, We Are One national day of solidarity; where Martin King III and AFL-CIO Executive Vice President both participated. All while attending Morehouse College for his undergraduate degree in Business management.
