MIDGE SWEET

Midge Sweet's career encompasses broad experience as a leader, manager and collaborative colleague. She has been deeply involved with the Atlanta community for over three decades, serving on a number of boards including Hands On Atlanta, Fulton-Atlanta Community Action Authority, Fulton County Board of Health, Grady High School Foundation, QUEST for Public Education, the Outdoor Activity Center, Sevananda Food Cooperative, Urban Studies Institute, and Mary Lin PTA, as well as acting as a founding organizer of Georgia Conservation Voters and the Inman Park Cooperative Preschool. Her commitment to building strong inner city public schools took the form of service as an elected member of the Atlanta Board of Education, where for eight years she represented 25 schools in District 1 (1990-97).

For over 20 years Midge has developed strategic communications, organizational and policy programs for a range of clients, including the Emory University School of Law, C.S. Mott Foundation, Rockefeller Family Fund, Sapelo Foundation, the City of Atlanta and the Metro Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. She has provided counsel to candidates seeking public office, assisting them in framing and implementing campaigns in state and local arenas, and has modeled this approach for efforts in health, juvenile justice, education, environment, energy and tax policy. Her particular talent combines success in targeting and achieving programmatic outcomes while strengthening teamwork and organizational effectiveness for the long-term.

Her diverse professional experience includes coalition director, Georgians for Smart Energy (2008-11); vice president, government relations, Metro Atlanta Chamber of Commerce (1999-2000); vice president Atlanta-based national consulting firm (1989-97); freelance writer/editor (1981-89); first executive coordinator of the Atlanta Clean City Commission (1977-78), by appointment of Mayor Maynard Jackson; and marketing assistant, Central Atlanta Progress, Inc. (1975-76).

For over a decade Midge has worked collaboratively with organizations around the state to develop policy and advocacy organizations, and has provided consulting services in the formation of the Georgia Budget and Policy Institute; Georgians for a Healthy Future; Georgians for Smart Energy; and Georgia Conservation Voters. Currently she is a Trustee of the Sapelo Foundation and a member of the Executive Committee of the Sierra Club, Georgia Chapter.

Thirty years ago Midge and her husband John invested in a graceful three-story office building, located in the Capitol Hill government center in Atlanta's south central business district, which has been the location of John's law practice and other businesses. The couple has a family commitment to the enhancement and development of a livable downtown.

Midge graduated from Yale College, with a B.A. degree in Literature. She is married to John Sweet, an attorney; they have two adult children.
